

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES

3 3433 07581007 1

YORKSHIRE WITH THE
WILD FLOWERS

Proctoceras, americanus.

11/12/07
Estuaries

IN BERKSHIRE

WITH THE

WILD FLOWERS

BERKSHIRE
WILD FLOWERS

ILLUSTRATED
BY HAMILTON GILL

C. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

1870

Eastman, Elaine (Fannie).

IN BERKSHIRE

WITH THE

WILD FLOWERS

BY

ELAINE AND DORA READ GOODALE
AUTHORS OF "APPLE BLOSSOMS"

ILLUSTRATED BY
W. HAMILTON GIBSON

NEW YORK
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
182 Fifth Avenue
1879-80

— — — — —

1. What is the primary purpose of the study? (e.g., to evaluate the effectiveness of a new treatment, to describe a population, to compare two groups).

1000 Journal of Health Politics

W. J. H. T. VAN DER VELDE

1. $\mathcal{L} = \mathcal{L}_0 + \mathcal{L}_1 + \mathcal{L}_2 + \mathcal{L}_3 + \mathcal{L}_4 + \mathcal{L}_5 + \mathcal{L}_6 + \mathcal{L}_7$

$$P \in P^{\mathrm{I}}(V^{\mathrm{I}} \otimes V^{\mathrm{II}})$$

¹ See, for example, the discussion of the "right to be forgotten" in the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), Article 17(1).

Eastman, Elaine (Footnote).

IN BERKSHIRE

WITH THE

WILD FLOWERS

BY

ELAINE AND DORA READ GOODALE
AUTHORS OF "APPLE BLOSSOMS"

ILLUSTRATED BY
W. HAMILTON GIBSON

NEW YORK
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
182 Fifth Avenue
1879-80

COPYRIGHT
1879
BY G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

CONTENTS.

OPENING POEM	ELAINE GOODALE.
TRAILING ARBUTUS	ELAINE GOODALE.
HEPATICA	DORA READ GOODALE.
ANEMONE	ELAINE GOODALE.
BLOODROOT	ELAINE GOODALE.
BLUE VIOLETS	DORA READ GOODALE.
WHITE VIOLETS	ELAINE GOODALE.
MEADOW RUE	ELAINE GOODALE.
TRILLIUM	DORA READ GOODALE.
WILD OAT	DORA READ GOODALE.
COLUMBINE	ELAINE GOODALE.
BLUE-EYED GRASS	ELAINE GOODALE.
WILD AZALEA	DORA READ GOODALE.
MOCASIN FLOWER	ELAINE GOODALE.
DAISIES	DORA READ GOODALE.
SWEET-BRIER	DORA READ GOODALE.
HAREBELL	ELAINE GOODALE.
MOUNTAIN LAUREL	ELAINE GOODALE.
WHITE CLOVER	DORA READ GOODALE.
RED CLOVER	DORA READ GOODALE.
MEADOW LILIES	DORA READ GOODALE.
WOOD LILIES	ELAINE GOODALE.
WILD CLEMATIS	DORA READ GOODALE.

CONTENTS.

INDIAN PIPE	(Monotropa uniflora.)	ELAINE GOODALE.
THISTLE.....	(Cirsium lanceolatum.)	ELAINE GOODALE.
SPIREA.....	(Spirea tomentosa.)	DORA READ GOODALE.
GOLDENROD.....	(Solidago altissima.)	ELAINE GOODALE.
ASTERS.....	(Aster —.)	DORA READ GOODALE.
CARDINAL FLOWER ...	(Lobelia cardinalis.)	DORA READ GOODALE.
FRINGED GENTIAN....	(Gentiana crinita.)	ELAINE GOODALE.
CLOSING POEM		ELAINE GOODALE.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS.

	PAGE
Title-Page.....	5
Trailing Arbutus.....	15
Hepatica.....	19
Anemone.....	21
Bloodroot.....	23
Blue Violets.....	27
Trillium.....	35
Wild Oat.....	37
Columbine.....	39
Wild Azalea.....	43
Daisies.....	49
Sweet-Brier.....	51
Harebell.....	53
Mountain Laurel.....	57
White Clover.....	59
Red Clover.....	62
Meadow Lilies.....	65
Wild Clematis.....	69
Indian Pipe.....	73
Thistle.....	75
Spirea.....	79
Goldenrod.....	81
Asters.....	83
Fringed Gentian.....	87

ERRATUM.

The illustration on page 37, through a misunderstanding on the part of the artist, represents the avena sativa instead of the ovularia sessilifolia of the poem. The design is, however, so graceful and attractive in itself, that it has been decided not to cancel it.

O STRANGE sweet season of up-heaving birth,
O oft-returning miracle of grace,
To whose eternal forces still we trace
Life's yearly ebb and flow, the newest joy of earth !

No weight of ages on her swelling breast
Can dull the keen delight of opening Spring ;
Fresh from a living hope the blue-birds sing,
The wild March winds wake still a chord of deep unrest.

The pulse of being mounting high and higher,
Life throbs anew at every bosom's core,—
We give ourselves to Nature's arms once more,
And yield to her control our unfulfilled desire !

Lo ! wind and rain are striving in her voice,
She bares her bosom to the ardent sun,
And we must feel her victories lost and won
Ere in her riper gains our eager hearts rejoice.

No idler fancy holds her serious eyes,
No lighter feeling drains the happy hours,
And he who stoops to reach her lowliest flowers,
Thro' reverent love alone may grasp their mysteries.

With steadfast mind we pass her threshold o'er,—
She takes our trust, she gives us greeting warm,
Withholds the rudeness of her sudden storm,
And casts her blossoming vines about the open door.

To us the birds their rarest meanings bring,
The tireless winds our burdened brows caress,
And, strangely stirred to thrilling tenderness,
We breathe in every flower the incense of the Spring.

Such would we follow thro' the varying year,
And feel with such its lightest phase of change,—
To Nature's deep emotions, deep and strange,
The impulse of a smile, the passion of a tear !

Lingering with few among the countless throng,
Yet loyal to the ones that seem forgot,
We fain would learn the secret of their lot,
And voice its hidden charm in kindred grace of song !

In these, perchance, no ready sequence lies,
Linked only by the season's rise and fall;
Yet thro', and over, and around them all
There flows the current strong of Time's great ministries.

So would we keep among these scattered flowers
A thread of graver purpose interwound,
A hint of something only to be found
Where from God's holiest heights unroll the golden hours !

No idler fancy holds her serious eyes,
No lighter feeling drains the happy hours,
And he who stoops to reach her lowliest flowers,
Thro' reverent love alone may grasp their mysteries.

With steadfast mind we pass her threshold o'er,—
She takes our trust, she gives us greeting warm,
Withholds the rudeness of her sudden storm,
And casts her blossoming vines about the open door.

To us the birds their rarest meanings bring,
The tireless winds our burdened brows caress,
And, strangely stirred to thrilling tenderness,
We breathe in every flower the incense of the Spring.

Such would we follow thro' the varying year,
And feel with such its lightest phase of change,—
To Nature's deep emotions, deep and strange,
The impulse of a smile, the passion of a tear!

Lingered with her, in the cool of the evening,
Yet joy'd to see the stars in the sky,
We f—
And we

In these, perchance, no ready sequence lies,
Linked only by the season's rise and fall;
Yet thro', and over, and around them all
There flows the current strong of Time's great ministries.

So would we keep among these scattered flowers
A thread of graver purpose interwound,
A hint of something only to be found
Where from God's holiest heights unroll the golden hours!

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

SINCE the winds of March gave outlet to the tidings
 they should bear,
Since the breath of inspiration swept upon the listening air,
 Weeks have brought but varying chances,
 Soft restraints and shy advances,
Warm desire, impetuous longing, met with tenderest delay ;
 Ours the restless hope and yearning,
 Theirs the slow but sure returning,—
Song and sunshine, bloom and brightness, growing nearer day by day.

We have known the wrath of Winter, in his mountain fastness strong,
Driving storms have raged against us, baffled and besieged us long;

Locked in snows, without repining
We have watched their crystal shining,
Dazzled back with steadfast vision that still radiance, cold and clear;
Now we gaze with lips a-tremble,
Now we soften and dissemble,
For those same compelling forces move us with the moving year !

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

Thus by random fancies fettered, with what rapture may we greet
One who shared our long probation, where the Spring and Winter meet ;
Wind and snow about her flying,
Safe her clustered buds were lying,
Folded close in russet woodlands, sheltered from the chilly air,—
Sweet her slumbers, all unbroken
By a trifler's careless token,
Till the magic kiss of April laid her virgin passion bare !

Then our darling, hid in silence where no careless footstep trod,
Felt the earliest beams of sunlight quicken in the yielding sod ;
Half confessed her heart's undoing
At the south-wind's whispered wooing, Heard the blue-bird's liquid warble dropping all the woodlands thro' ;

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

While, thro' long and quiet hours,
Fell the warm unceasing showers
From a sky of tender saffron slow dissolving in the blue.

Needless doubt and pain of April, hope that baffles and eludes,
Thro' the waiting weeks she followed, patient with his changing moods ;
Now the long suspense is over,
Now she turns to greet her lover,
With the soft auroral color mantling over cheek and brow ;
And her dewy lips he presses,
And she thrills with light caresses,— Shy and cold while yet unbidden, wifely chaste and tender now !

Hail the flower whose early bridal makes the festival of Spring !
Deeper far than outward meaning lies the comfort
she doth bring ;

TRAILING ARBUTUS.

From the heights of happy winning,
Gaze we back on hope's beginning,
Feel the vital strength and beauty hidden from our eyes before ;
And we know, with hearts grown stronger,
Tho' our waiting seemeth longer,
Yet, with Love's divine assurance, we should covet nothing more.

HEPATICA.

ALL the woodland path is broken
By warm tints along the way,
And the low and sunny slope
Is alive with sudden hope,
When there comes the silent token
Of an April day,—
 Blue hepatica !

O the earth's unconscious bosom
Such rare color never knew !
 All unknown to shy delay,
 All unheeded by the May,
Starts to life the varying blossom,
Fed by sun and dew,—
 Faint hepatica !

HEPATICA.

Come ! for long has been our waiting,
Wayward impulse of the Spring,—
 Longings by the March wind stirred
 Have been lost through hope deferred ;
You, from utter darkness breaking,
 Newer light may bring,
 Fair hepatica !

Clear the brook beside you singing—
 Do you hear it and obey ?
 Does it bid you now lift up
 The blue light within your cup,
All your earth-born perfume bringing
 To the open day,—
 Sweet hepatica ?

ANEMONE.

A WINDFLOWER by the mountain stream
Where April's wayward breezes blow,
And still in sheltered hollows gleam
The lingering drifts of snow:

ANEMONE.

Whence art thou, frailest flower of Spring ?
Did winds of heaven give thee birth ?
Too free, too airy-light a thing
For any child of earth !

O palest of pale blossoms borne
On timid April's virgin breast,
Hast thou no flush of passion worn,
No mortal bond confessed ?

Thou mystic spirit of the wood,
Why that ethereal grace that seems
A vision of our actual good
Linked with the land of dreams ?

Thou didst not start from common ground,—
So tremulous on thy slender stem ;
Thy sisters may not clasp thee round
Who art not one with them.

Thy subtle charm is strangely given,
My fancy will not let thee be,—
Then poise not thus 'twixt earth and heaven,
O white anemone !

BLOODROOT.

Not pressing close on crowded ways,
Not shrinking back from any eye,
But calm beneath the open sky,
And slow to meet our ruder gaze :

Scarce answering to the sudden thrill
Of doubt and mystery wafted hence,
Yet helping to a deeper sense
Of vital force unmeasured still :

BLOODROOT.

In April's hour of virgin fame
The bloodroot gives her blossom birth,
And trusts within the kindly earth
The hidden sources of her shame.

Along the teeming meadow-side,
Hard by the river-banks are seen
Her close-veined sheaths of tender green,
With generous frankness opening wide.

When lo ! the secret of an hour
By throbbing April warmth unsealed,
In sudden splendor stands revealed
The glowing whiteness of the flower :

A pure large flower of simple mold,
And touched with soft peculiar bloom,
Its petals faint with strange perfume,
And in their midst a disk of gold !

O bloodroot ! in thy tingling veins
The sap of life runs cold and clear ;
I break thy shining stem, and fear
No conscious guilt, no lasting stains.

BLOODROOT.

I brand with shame thy peerless brow,
Whose golden coronet is riven,
And cast to all the winds of heaven
Thy drifts of many-petaled snow !

Yet, ere the reckless deed appears,
Thy truth compels my heart's disguise,
Thy beauty pains my mortal eyes,
Thy pulse-beats hammer in my ears.

I seem myself the panting earth,
The Spring within me newly born ;
I feel thee from my breast uptorn,—
I grapple with a larger birth.

My narrow senses downward hurled,
In upper air I blindly grope—
I strive to reach a living hope,
And blossom in the spirit world !

Go, struggles deep, and visions wild,
From heart and brain I set you free ;
Thro' human need I still must see
And grasp the human undefiled.

BLOODROOT.

Go, wondrous flower—thy soul is mine—
My gazing cannot do thee wrong ;
To me the conscious pangs belong !
To me, at last, the right divine !

BLUE VIOLETS.

THE violet blooms with every Spring,
With every Spring the breezes blow,
And once again the robins sing
A song more sweet than June can know.

So with the violet comes desire
For something else than common gain,—
The glow of more than earthly fire,
The sting of more than actual pain.

A thousand slackened memories start,
Encompassed by a violet's breath,—
The vital wish of every heart,
The Life that triumphs over Death.

A blossom of returning light,
An April flower of sun and dew;
The earth and sky, the day and night
Are melted in her depth of blue !

BLUE VIOLETS.

So comes and goes an April day,
And so the violet comes and goes,—
A few pale blossoms grace the May,
A last faint breath the May-wind blows.

But now the air is full and free
With quickening pulses of the Spring,
And longing for the life to be
The phœbes of a sudden sing.

And on a green and shaded slope
The air is stirred with sweet perfumes,
Where, in the heat and light of hope,
Again the rare blue violet blooms !

WHITE VIOLETS.

RAIN above the thirsting sod,
Rain within the budding wood,
Dropping earthward, dropping ever soft and slow ;
Rain its solemn chant repeating
 On the hushed and darkened air,
Rain with even pulses beating
 Thro' the fitful fever there ;
We, who live and long for much,
Still divine its magic touch,
Drink its silver cadence still,
Open to its inmost thrill,—
Gone from us the restless pain,
Ours the blessing of the rain,
Ours the silent grace that hallows all below !

Flowers amid the dripping moss,
Tearful flowers that sweeten loss,

WHITE VIOLETS.

Pressing closer on the myriads in their train ;
White as milk, and perfume-laden,
 Purple-veined and golden-eyed,—
Still with sweeter solace waiting
 Where the swollen streams divide ;
We, released from strifes and cares,
Press our burning lips to theirs,
Share their mood of still delight,
Drink their unimpassioned light;
Gone from us the fever-heats,
Ours the breath of violets,—
These we follow in the footsteps of the rain !

MEADOW RUE.

Below the slopes of tender green,
Starred thick with pale forget-me-nots,
Below the hedge-row's milk-white bloom,
Where bees hum deep in faint perfume,
The brook winds in and out between
Its grassy knolls and alder-knots ;
There dewy stillness cools the aching brow,
There restful shade shuts out the random day ;
Sweet refuge from the virginal overflow,
The blossomed grace of May !

'Tis there a modest floweret grows,
Whose lightest touch renewes the place ;
With drooping leaves, but half unrolled,
And tasselled fringe of tawny gold,
O'er all the shady bank she throws
A wilder charm, a fresher grace ;

MEADOW RUE.

Adown the steep in careless freedom flung,
Caught up with wandering fringes, loose and cool,
And left the dripping, deep-green moss 'among,
Beside some quiet pool.

Now circled by the dizzying tide,
And wet with drift of blinding spray;
Now on the sloping turf reclined,
And stirred by breezes soft and kind ;
Now half-way up the jagged side
Of cliffs that break the narrow way ;—
Hers is a native lightness, fine and free,
A grave and quiet beauty, fitting best,
A sylvan charm of frank simplicity,
And most, a sense of rest.

When emerald slopes are drowned in song,
When weary grows the unclouded blue,
When warm winds sink in billowy bloom,
And flood you with a faint perfume,
One moment leave the rapturous throng
To seek the haunts of meadow rue !

MEADOW RUE.

There dewy stillness cools the aching brow,
There grateful shade shuts out the oppressive day;
Sweet refuge from the sensuous overflow,
The wanton grace of May !

TRILLIUM.

WHERE the landlocked wind-storm rages,
Rushing thro' the wild ravine,
Where the gathered dust of ages
Is renewed in tenderest green ;
Where the passionate pulse of power
Beats along its strong career,
You may find a three-cleft flower
In the spring-time of the year !

TRILLIUM.

Winter winds thro' mountain passes
Break athwart the frosty night ;
Spring among the seething grasses
Stirs a newer pulse of light ;
Sweet and strange the April weather.—
Generous she of heart and hand,
Sun and storm she brings together,
Strong to conquer and command.

Now about the rugged places
And along the ruined way,
Light and free in sudden graces
Comes the careless tread of May,—
Born of tempest, wrought in power,
Stirred by sudden hope and fear,
You may find a mystic flower
In the spring-time of the year !

WILD OAT.

WINDS are growing sweeter
 Day by day ;
Spring is here, the fields have seen her,
And are growing greener, greener,
And the woods have found so much
In the magic of her touch,
That the golden mist of April
 Deepens with the May !

Now we feel the new enchantment
 Of the May ;
April days were less than living,
Ours the asking, hers the giving,—
In the golden May-tide weather
We can ask and give together,
Now no more we wait and listen
 Day by day.

* See erratum, page 9.

WILD OAT.

To the green and sunlit forest,
 Late so gray,
Come the careless robins daily,
There to call and carol gayly,
And the chime of blossom-bells
Fuller harmony foretells,
In the borders of the forest
 Ringing in the May !

Waits the flower amid her shadows
 All the day,
And the slender birch-tree glistens
Where she droops her head and listens,
And her footprints I discover
Where the sweet-fern closes over,
Round the edges of the woodlands,
 Tender with the May !

O the lights of earth and heaven,
 Growing day by day ;
O the winds among the grasses,—
Showers, along the mountain passes ;
O the shy, straw-colored bell
In the shadow of the dell,
Heir to all the early freedom
 Of the May !

COLUMBINE.

SPRUNG in a cleft of the wayside steep,
And saucily nodding, flushing deep,
With her airy tropic bells aglow,—
Bold and careless, yet wondrous light,
And swung into poise on the stony height,
Like a challenge flung to the world below !

COLUMBINE.

Skirting the rocks at the forest edge
With a running flame from ledge to ledge,
Or swaying deeper in shadowy glooms,
A smoldering fire in her dusky blooms ;
Bronzed and molded by wind and sun,
Maddening, gladdening every one
With a gypsy beauty full and fine,—
A health to the crimson columbine !

BLUE-EYED GRASS

In the blind meadow, overflowing
With sweet, new life in every place,
Where ferns and lightest grasses growing
Mingle in one harmonious grace ;
O deeper than all conscious being
Still throbs the quickened pulse of Air,
For something lies beyond the seeing,
Divinely fair !

Low down among the daisies lying,
Near to the great warm heart of Earth,
My secret clue eludes the trying,
Merged in a new and larger birth ;
I lose myself in holy union,
I cannot stand and gaze apart,
In that unbroken, close communion
Heart learns of heart.

BLUE-EYED GRASS.

What impulse stirs the feathery grasses,
And dips along their wavering line ?
While, as the sudden tremor passes,
Two strange, sweet eyes look up to mine !
Eyes with a more than human pleading,
So poet-deep, so maiden-shy ;
Till all my soul is drowned in gazing,—
O rare blue eye !

My spirit-flower, my heaven-sent blossom,
I held your secret in my hand,
I caught and clasped you to my bosom,
I thought to see and understand :
O fatal haste ! thou has undone me,
Yet, yet unsolved the mystery lies ;
They closed, and shut the wonder from me,
Those deep, dark eyes !

WILD AZALEA.

O NEWEST longing, O most dear desire,
 Unsatisfied, unknown !
All the broken woodland path
Little light or color hath,
Save the glory breaking in Thro' the depth of tender green,—
 We are here alone !

WILD AZALEA.

Whence is the sacred music of the wood,
The clear, the tireless tone?
Thro' misty ways we blindly grope
To catch the earliest signs of hope,
Sun or shade or restless wind,
Whatso pleasures we may find,—
We are here alone.

A sudden presence stirs the solemn wood,
A secret not its own,
A youthful light, an open grace,
An equal strength in every place,
And, far up the steep ascent,
Warmth and quick desire are lent
Where we wait alone !

O far away in yonder leafy copse
The wandering thrush has flown,
And close along the wooded steep
We know an influence passing deep,
The Summer light, the Summer tone,
The rare azalea makes her own,—
And we are not alone !

MOCCASIN FLOWER.

STATELY and calm the forest rears its crown
 Above the eternal height,—
Wide sweeps of early color, shimmering down,
 Renew its gracious might!
Along the farthest ridge tall chestnuts grow,
 Mixed dark with rugged pines,
And follow all the gentler slopes below
 In grand, harmonious lines.
Their slender limbs toss upward to the sky
 A billowy spray of green,—
The massy oak-tree's richer canopy
 Weaves ample shade between.
Alike thro' coppice warm and rocky dell
 The rare azaleas press,—
Long vistas touched with rosy bloom reveal
 Their truant loveliness ;
Young growths with tender leafage springing light,
Crowd up on every side,

MOCCASIN FLOWER.

And paths whose flow is rhythmic with delight
Their magic open wide !

Yet shy and proud among the forest flowers,
In maiden solitude,
Is one whose charm is never wholly ours,
Nor yielded to our mood :
One true-born blossom, native to our skies,
We dare not claim as kin,
Nor frankly seek, for all that in it lies,
The Indian's moccasin.

Graceful and tall the slender drooping stem,
With two broad leaves below,
Shapely the flower so lightly poised between,
And warm her rosy glow ;
Yet loneliest rock-strewn haunts are all her bent,
She heeds no soft appeal,
And they alone who dare a rude ascent
Her equal charm may feel.

We long with her to leave the beaten road,
The paths that cramp our feet,
And follow upward thro' the tangled wood,
By highways cool and sweet ;
From dewy glade to bold and rugged steep
Pass fleet as winds and showers,—

MOCCASIN FLOWER.

For lightly ever falls the tireless foot
That's only shod with flowers !
No lagging step outruns the happy days,—
Our tread is soft as rain ;
With careless joy we thread the woodland ways
And reach her broad domain.
Thro' sense of strength and beauty, free as air,
We feel our savage kin,—
And thus alone with conscious meaning wear
The Indian's moccasin !

DAISIES.

THE hills are faint in a cloudy blue,
That loses itself where the sky bends over,
The wind is shaking the orchard thro',
And sending a quiver thro' knee-deep clover.

The air is sweet with a strange perfume,
That comes from the depths of the woodland places,
The fields are hid in a wealth of bloom,
And white with the sweep of the ox-eye daisies !

And farther down, where the brook runs thro',
Where the ferns are cool in the imprisoned shadow,
We still may see, thro' the morning dew,
The swell and dip of the daisied meadow.

DAISIES.

And then when the wind across it blows,
And the wavering lines of silver follow,
We catch the gleam of her heart of gold,
While over her skims the fleet-winged swallow.

Clear and simple in white and gold,
Meadow blossom of sunlit spaces,—
The field is full as it well can hold
And white with the drift of the ox-eye daisies !

SWEET-BRIER.

I CHANCED upon a rose the other day,
A pale and faded flower, forgotten long,
And with it these unfinished verses lay,
The faltering echo of a deeper song:—

A perfect day in June,—the golden sun
Looks down upon the green and tangled way ;
The Summer song and silence are as one,—
The light and longing of a Summer's day !

O untaught harmony of Summer days !
The distant tinkle of a waterfall,
The blue, blue sky that deepens as you gaze,
The wayward rose that blossoms by the wall !

SWEET-BRIER.

Unspoiled and sweet in every country lane,
All dewy cool in maiden pink she blooms,
Still green and fragrant thro' the Summer rain,
When freer airs are thrilled with light perfumes.

She blossoms close beside the dusty way,
Her heart the careless passer-by may see,—
Sweet is her fragrance thro' the burning day,
But sweeter is her open secrecy!

Though he who will may pierce her leafy green,
Where sits the brooding robin on its nest,
The secret of her life is all unseen,
Unknown the impulse of her sweet unrest.

All day the winds about her cool the air,
Faint sounds the tinkle of the waterfall,—
What is the sudden answer you may bear,
O wayward rose, that blossoms by the wall?

HAREBELL.

HAREBELL.

Low adown the gracious meadow, dappled close with sun and shadow,
Rounded soft by waving grasses, thro' a hundred falling lines,
Drowsy as the noontide found her, with her ample robes around her,
Summer, lost in idle musing, at her ease reclines.

Floating free in dell and hollow, ere the fleetfoot daisies follow,
Springing light where swoon the breezes, warm against her throbbing breast,
Pure and deep, yet swaying lowly to a rhythm
sweet and holy,
Myriad harebells meet and tremble o'er her dream-
less rest.

High above the quiet valley, where she loves to droop and dally,
All along the windy headlands, where the rock is steep and bare,

HAREBELL.

Summer stays a moment only,—leaves her kingdom wild and lonely,
And her warm breath chills to vapor on the frosty air.

Yet in bleak and barren places, fresh with unexpected graces,
Leaning over rocky ledges, tenderest glances to bestow,
Dauntless still in time of danger, thrilling every wayworn stranger,
Scattered harebells earn a triumph never known below !

MOUNTAIN LAUREL.

Now comes the fullness of the year,
 The flood-tide of a living joy,
When never hope admits of fear,
 Nor any pleasures cloy;
From birds that stir the meadow grass,
 From winds that sweep the woodland ways,
A thousand voices come and pass,
 In chants of love and praise.

Now swells the forest, calm and wide,
 In rippling waves of deepest green,
And all the rugged mountain side
 Thro' billowy curves is seen;
The roadsides meet in ample shade,
 With showers of light and golden glooms,
And bubbling up the rocky ways
 The clustered laurel blooms.

MOUNTAIN LAUREL.

As beauty breaks thro' graver truth,
With press of forms and flush of hues,
Her blushes, warm with conscious youth,
The shadowy darks suffuse;

MOUNTAIN LAUREL.

The Summer owns her wide control,
She holds it to her regal place,
Her art completes the gracious whole,
Herself the central grace !

Each chalice holds the infinite air,
Each rounded cluster grows a sphere ;
A twilight pale she grants us there,
A rosier sunrise here ;
She broods above the happy earth,
She dwells upon the enchanted days,—
A thousand voices hail her birth
In chants of love and praise !

WHITE CLOVER.

THE distant hills, the long day
thro',
Have fainted in a haze of blue,
The sun has been a burning fire,
The day has been a warm desire,—
But all desire is over;

WHITE CLOVER.

The lights are fading from the west,
The night has brought a dreamy rest,
And deep in yonder wood is heard
The sudden singing of a bird,—
While here an evening wind has stirred
A slope set thick with clover.

The fields have lost their lingering light,
The path is dusky thro' the night,—
The clover is too sweet to lose
Her fragrance with the gathering dews,—
The skies are warm above her:
The cricket pipes his song again,
The cows are waiting in the lane,
The shadows fall adown the hill,
And silent is the whippoorwill ;
But thro' the summer twilight still
You smell the milk-white clover.

The glory of the day has ceased,
The moon has risen in the east,
The distant hills, the meadows near,
Are bathed in moonlight soft and clear,
That vails the landscape over ;

WHITE CLOVER.

And born of rare and strange perfume,
Pure as the clover's odorous bloom,
Dear hopes, that are but half confessed,
Dim thoughts and longings fill the breast,
Till lost again in deeper rest
Among the blossomed clover.

RED CLOVER.

CRIMSON clover I discover
By the garden gate,
And the bees about her hover,
But the robins wait.
- Sing, robins, sing,
Sing a roundelay,—
'Tis the latest flower of Spring,
Coming with the May!

Crimson clover I discover
- In the open field,
Mellow sunlight brooding over,
All her warmth revealed.
- Sing, robins, sing,
'Tis no longer May,— Fuller bloom doth Summer bring,
Ripened thro' delay!

MEADOW LILIES.

To the meadow, where the swallows
 Dip and soar the long day through,
And among the hills and hollows
 Harebells hang their cups of blue,
Comes a flower of dusky splendor,
 With a rare and queenly grace,
And a stately beauty, lent her
 By the golden August days.

Round about her birds are singing,
 Grasses nodding, with the bloom
Of the passing Summer clinging
 To each tall and slender plume ;
Proud she stands, yet all unconscious
 (As a princess, strong to win),
Of the deepening shadows round her,
 And the mellow light within.

MEADOW LILIES.

Winds across the uplands flying,
Sink in whispers at her feet,
Murmuring in the grass, and dying
Where her beauty stands complete ;
Not to heaven her head she raises,—
Fairest flower along the dell,—
But to meet the upturned daisies
Low she droops her dusky bell !

Young with morning's first awaking,
Languid thro' the burning noon,
With a warmth and fullness breaking
Thro' the round of life and tune ;
Half concealed her sumptuous beauty,
Grave yet gracious is her mien,
In the close, oppressive stillness
Folding all the meadow's green.

Clustered lilies in the shadows,
Lapt in golden ease they stand,
Rarest flower in all the meadows,
Richest flower in all the land ;

MEADOW LILIES.

Royal lilies in the sunlight,
Brave with Summer's fair array,
Drowsy thro' the evening silence,
Crown of all the August day !

66

WOOD LILIES.

THRO' trellised roadway edges,
And open woodland range,
By ruined walls and hedges,
Laid low thro' endless change,
They kindle sparks of being,
Flame upward ever higher,
And break the moveless verdure
With shifting lines of fire.

The laden bee hums past them,
The wind sweeps idly by,
And higher swells above them
A dome of sapphire sky ;
Each broken arch of shadow
Lies strewn in fragments there,
Each shaft of sunlight shivered
Athwart the crystal air.

WOOD LILIES.

O lilies, upturned lilies,
How swift their prisoned rays
To smite with fire from Heaven
The fainting August days !
Tall urns of blinding beauty,
As vestals pure they hold,—
In each a blaze of scarlet
Half blotted out with gold !

Thro' trellised roadway edges,
And open woodland range,
By ruined walls and hedges,
In every phase of change,
They lift in holy vigils
The year's unquenched desire,
And break the moveless verdure
With shifting lines of fire !

WILD CLEMATIS.

WHERE the woodland stream-lets flow,
Gushing down a rocky bed,
Where the tasselled alders grow,
Lightly meeting overhead,
When the fullest August days

WILD CLEMATIS.

Give the richness that they know,
Then the wild clematis comes,
With her wealth of tangled blooms,
Reaching up and drooping low.

And her fresh leaves only shade
That which is within her bower,
Like a curtain, lightly made,
Half to hide her virgin flower;
None too close to let the wind
Find a place to breathe between,
Where the wild bee cannot miss
All the sweetness that there is,
Underneath her tent of green.

And the sunlight flickers in,
So to touch her maiden breast;
And between her twists of vine
Sings the woodbird to his nest;
And the air is wondrous sweet,
And the twilight lingers long,—
And the young birds learn to fly
In among her greenery,
And she hears their earliest song.

WILD CLEMATIS.

But when Autumn days are here,
And the woods of Autumn burn,
Then her leaves are black and sere,
Quick with early frosts to turn!
As the golden Summer dies,
So her silky green has fled,
And the smoky clusters rise
As from fires of sacrifice,—
Sacred incense to the dead!

INDIAN PIPE.

DEATH in the wood,—
Death, and a scent of decay;
Death, and a horror that creeps with the blood,
And stiffens the limbs to clay;
For the rains are heavy and slow,
And the leaves are shrunken and wan,
And the winds are sobbing weary and low,
And the life of the year is gone.

Death in the wood,—
Death in its fold over fold,
Death,—that I shuddered and sank where I stood,
At the touch of a hand so cold,—
At the touch of a hand so cold,
And the sight of a clay-white face,
For I saw the corse of the friend I loved,
And a hush fell over the place.

INDIAN PIPE.

Death in the wood,—
Death, and a scent of decay,
Death, and a horror but half understood,
Where blank as the dead I lay ;
What curse hung
over the earth,
What woe to the tribes of men,
That we felt as a death what was made for a birth,—
And a birth sinking death-ward again !

Death in the wood,—
In the death-pale lips apart ;
Death in a whiteness that curdled the blood,
Now black to the very heart :
The wonder by her was formed
Who stands supreme in power ;
To show that life by the spirit comes
She gave us a soulless flower !

THISTLE.

HE knew her mocked by thoughtless youth,
He knew her left to ways forlorn;
Full well he knew the shallow scorn
That mocks on earth the noblest born,
And blinds our eyes to deeper truth.

He sought her thro' the feverish days,
In rocky pastures, hot and dry;
Alone beneath the burning sky,
He knew her deepest truth must lie
Beyond his pity or his praise.

Neglect and care to her were one,—
She read no glance, she made no sign,
But, safe from speech of his or mine,
Inspired, controlled, by light divine,
Her spirit drank the eternal sun!

THISTLE.

He soiled her not with touch profane,
Nor stabbed her with unholy eyes;
A truer instinct made him wise,
With her he shared the earth and skies,
And still forbore a nearer claim.

Outstretched beneath the absolute heaven,
Along the parching earth he lay,
Till, thro' the breathless August day,
He felt a conscious sympathy,
A subtle knowledge, subtly given.

A life intense within him grew;
His thought a second self became,
And mixt his youthful blood with flame,—
Her separate throes of passion-pain
Swept all his tingling pulses thro'!

The sun, a throbbing ball of fire
Dropped slowly down the blanching west,—
He staggered by, as one possessed,
Still dizzy with the thought unguessed,
The ache and throb of strong desire.

THISTLE.

She flinched not from the truth revealed,
Nor thirsted for a soul complete;
Her being yearns with forceful heat,—
Yet He thro' whom her heart doth beat
Hath left her lips forever sealed !

SPIREA. .

A rocky path winds slowly down
Hard by the steep ravine below;
The ferns are green beside the ledge,
And light along its broken edge
The scattered daisies grow.

And yet she follows every turn
With spires of closely clustered bloom,
And all the wildness of the place,
The narrow pass, the rugged ways,
But give her larger room.

SPIREA.

And near the unfrequented road,
By waysides scorched with barren heat,
In clouded pink or softer white
She holds the Summer's generous light,—
Our native meadow-sweet!

GOLDENROD.

WHEN the wayside tangles blaze
In the low September sun,
When the flowers of Summer days
Droop and wither, one by one,
Reaching up through bush and brier,
Sumptuous brow and heart of fire,
Flaunting high its wind-rocked plume,
Brave with wealth of native bloom,—
Goldenrod !

When the meadow, lately shorn,
Parched and languid, swoons with pain,
When her life-blood, night and morn,
Shrinks in every throbbing vein,
Round her fallen, tarnished urn
Leaping watch-fires brighter burn ;
Royal arch o'er Autumn's gate,
Bending low with lustrous weight,—
Goldenrod !

GOLDENROD.

In the pasture's rude embrace,
All o'errun with tangled vines,
Where the thistle claims its place,
And the straggling hedge confines,
Bearing still the sweet impress
Of unfettered loveliness,
In the field and by the wall,
Binding, clasping, crowning all,—
Goldenrod!

Nature lies disheveled, pale,
With her feverish lips apart,—
Day by day the pulses fail,
Nearer to her bounding heart;
Yet that slackened grasp doth hold
Store of pure and genuine gold;
Quick thou comest, strong and free,
Type of all the wealth to be,— Goldenrod !

ASTERS.

WALLED in with fire on either hand
I walk the lonely wood-road thro';
The maples flame above my head,
And spaces whence the wind has shed
About my feet the living red,
Are filled with broken blue.

And crowding close along the way
The purple asters blossom free;

ASTERS.

In full profusion, far and wide,
They fill the path on every side,
In loose confusion multiplied
To endless harmony !

The Autumn wood the aster knows,
The empty nest, the wind that grieves,
The sunlight breaking thro' the shade,
The squirrel chattering overhead,
The timid rabbit's lighter tread
Among the rustling leaves.

And still beside the shadowy glen
She holds the color of the skies ;
Along the purpling wayside steep
She hangs her fringes passing deep,
And meadows drowned in happy sleep
Are lit by starry eyes !

CARDINAL FLOWER.

SLOWLY the black water gathers in
 To itself a hundred folded lines ;
Thro' the yellow willows at its brim
 Pale and cold the waning sunlight shines,
As the Autumn color waxes dim.

To the westward burns the smoldering day,
 Still and solemn, in the sunset sky ;
In the purple hollows far away
 Shadowy veils of early evening lie,
And the distant mountain-tops are gray.

In the stagnant pool, stirred by a breath,
 All the shifting light and color lies,
In its shallows, dim with brooding death,
 All the sweeping splendors of the skies
Glass themselves, and scatter light beneath.

CARDINAL FLOWER.

Whence is yonder flower so strangely bright?
Would the sunset's last reflected shine
Flame so red from that dead flush of light?
Dark with passion is its lifted line,
Hot, alive, amid the falling night.

Still it burns intenser as I gaze,
Till its heart-fire quickens with my own,
And when night shuts in the dusky ways
Red and strange shine out the lights of home,
Where my flower its parting sign delays.

FRINGED GENTIAN.

ALONG this quiet wood-road, winding slow,
When free October ranged its sylvan ways,
And, vaulting up the terraced steep below,
Chased laughing sunbeams thro' the golden days,
In matchless beauty, tender and serene,
The gentian reigned, an undisputed queen.

FRINGED GENTIAN.

One sudden break, half down the lengthening shade,

Revealed a dark-rimmed circle, still and lone,—
Her presence filled that sun-illumined glade,

She made the enchanted solitude her own ;
The heavens above their watch eternal kept,
And, steeped in light, the embracing woodland slept.

Pale knots of grasses fringed the open space,

Her lifted cups passed lightly thro' and thro',—
Each chalice molded in divinest grace,

Each brimmed with pure, intense and perfect blue ;

Alone, and spotless in her virgin fame,
Her life upheld the year's immortal claim.

Now wail low winds about the forest eaves,

Now life grows cold 'neath cold and dreary skies,

And rustling ankle-deep in fallen leaves,

The lone, deserted wood-path blanching lies ;
Yet, pinched and wan, of youthful charm bereft,
The last forsaken gentian still is left.

FRINGED GENTIAN.

A wondrous fairness hath the perfect flower,
 Serenely calm beneath a sapphire sky,
But holier far, in Autumn's wildest hour,
 The constant love that cannot wholly die;
To me her radiant youth new faith did bring,
 Yet now her pallor seems a higher thing.

Thrilled by her gaze, I deem no fancy wild
 Where spirit grace outlasts the ruder clay;
For me, the Autumn's last and loveliest child
 Takes not even now her haunting charm away,
But when cold storms have stripped the snow-clad hill,
In finer spirit-presence lingers still !

IN blackness sinks the dull November day,
With gathering night the air grows bitter chill,
While, over sodden field and leafless hill,
The wind, in sullen mood, disturbs the curtained gray.

No tardy color breaks the dreary line,
No bird note lingers in the frosty air,
The skies are blank, the earth is cold and bare,— Hope droops her shining wings, and gives no happier sign.

Mute Sorrow broods above the lonely heath,
And folds us closer in her funeral pall;
Our sinking hearts accept the doom of all,
And still obey her word who bringeth life and death.

Yet not alone the symbols of decay,
We can but see the signs of newer birth;
Pilloved on quiet snows, the sleeping earth
Holds all her power in check, and waits the coming day!

The stately hemlocks keep their mantled green,
And front the blast with all their ancient pride;
And even the pencilled alders still abide,— Their catkins tightly closed droop blackly o'er the stream.

O wild-wood flowers, we knew and loved you well,
Yet cannot mourn for that which is not lost,
No piercing blast, no hard relentless frost,
Can reach the inner world where you were wont to dwell !

The reigning year no absolute power can bring,
Beyond its rule our true allegiance lies ;
We brave the night with glad, prophetic eyes,
And lo ! returns afar our hope's immortal Spring !

The skies hang dark, the wind is sighing low,—
We calmly smile, our hearts are strong to wait;
We leave our garland safe from cruel Fate,
Laid close and warm beneath the softly falling snow.

15

